Consumer Information

The law requires manufacturers offering to sell new computer equipment in or into Texas to provide a program for collecting and recycling of consumers' used computer equipment.

Since Sept. 1, 2008, manufacturers have had to provide a program. Each manufacturer is responsible only for its own brand (s) of computer equipment. The collection and recycling must be convenient and free at the time of recycling. The rules define computer equipment as:

- a monitor,
- a desktop computer or laptop, and
- an accompanying keyboard and mouse made by the same manufacturer.

The manufacturers are required to offer collection and recycling only for computer equipment purchased primarily for personal or home-business use—regardless of when it was sold; that is, not just computer equipment purchased after Sept. 1, 2008.

By law, you will be responsible for any confidential information left on the computer equipment.

Hazardous Materials

Many hazardous materials can not be recycled. They should still be properly disposed of to avoid damage to the environment.

In business, the term hazardous materials covers a lot. It could mean:

- Automotive products
- Batteries
- Cleaning supplies
- Manufacturing chemicals
- Medical waste
- Paint
- Pesticides

Many hazardous materials can not be recycled. They can however be reduced and reused. Most importantly, they should be properly disposed of because they can do a lot of damage to the environment in landfills.
